

Exercise 8.6:

Should back-face culling be applied in the context of radiosity models, before (8.9) is established?

Solution:

Even though a polygon might not be visible for the viewer, it might still reflect light on other surfaces that are visible for the viewer. This means they must be taken into account in the radiosity equations. Back-face culling must not be applied before (8.9) is established.